Local man follows, helps apprehend possible burglar

By Steve Marschke

One week after police arrested a pair of suspects in a string of Southport-area burglaries, another suspected burglar has been caught.

Details were unavailable at press time, but West Sacramento resident Steve Johnson of Seymour Ave. reported that he helped corner the man who may have burglarized Johnson's home on Monday. He described the man as being in his "early 50s," and said the suspect was driving a brown, four-door American car when picked up by police near Shirley's Deli on Jefferson Blvd.

Johnson, 32, owns a local root barrier company -- Johnson RCT Service.

His adventure began earlier Monday, when his grandmother told him she had noticed a strange car -- a brown sedan -- in front of his home at around 3 p.m.

"I thought, if there was a car there at the time of day, then I got robbed," said Johnson.

This turned about to be true. Someone had broken through a front window and burglarized the house.

"They broke into my house at around three that afternoon. It was the third time I've been burglarized. I don't have any nice stuff anymore."

Johnson's home is located in a rural neighborhood in Southport, where houses often sit on one acre or more and neighbors are somewhat spread out. The region has been hit with a wave of burglaries in recent weeks.

Later the same evening -- at about 10 p.m. -- Johnson was at his parents house on nearby Marshall Road when he saw a brown four door car in front of a neighbor's house, and connected it with the description his grandmother had given him.

"I got my shotgun and got in my car. I didn't find him at first, but he went past me down another street."

Johnson used his cellular phone to contact a police dispatcher, who sent help.

Meanwhile, the suspect stopped at "about six different houses, to see what I was doing following him."

The two travelled around the south part of West Sacramento as Johnson waited for the police.

"He went into Arlington Oaks (housing subdivision), and I lost him there. I figured he had headed back to town, and I went north on Jefferson."

Steve Johnson

But the search seemed to be over.

"I was going to go home, but something told me to go down to 7-11, and sure enough, he was there, pumping gas in his car."

The suspect drove back towards Johnson's neighborhood, across the Stone Lock Bridge, and Johnson tried to stay with him. When he connected with a police officer near Marshall Road, all he could see were a pair of tail lights in the distance that he hoped was the right car.

"He turned and came back towards us," related Johnson. "The officer said, 'Tell me if that's the right car, and it was. We made a U-turn and followed him."

The police car and Johnson quickly caught up to the suspect, who quietly obeyed orders to turn around and place his hands on the car.

"The car didn't even have an ignition assembly in it -- he'd been starting it with a screwdriver and it was probably stolen. There was a purse in there with some stolen stuff in it, but none of it was mine. The officer said if it weren't for me, they never would have caught the guy."

Police told Johnson that the man had apparently only been out of jail for a day or two. He was arrested for parole violation, since he was found in possession of stolen property.

Sheriff's deputy finds mail stolen from West Sac

By Steve Marschke

Residents of several West Sacramento areas found that they had been victimized by mail theft when postal authorities returned a number of pieces of their opened mail collected from near the north edge of town.

"Evidently, the Yolo County Sheriff's Department found a paper bag and it was stuffed," said Roger Paulat, a supervisor of customer services at the West Sacramento post office on Merkley Ave. "They picked it up and looked inside and it was full of mail."

Paulat said that "all the mail was opened. Some of the mail that was in there dated back to January."

Samples were found from houses along the rural area of Yolo County near West Sacramento's Bryte (northwest) neighborhood, from Southport streets including Summerfield and Janet drives, and from an area of Sacramento.

"If it had been from just one area, then maybe it could have been a postal carrier who stole the mail," said Paulat, "but since it was from different areas in Sacramento and West Sacramento, there is no way."

The mail was found along the river road outside northern city limits. The thieves evidently had more time than discretion in opening the mail in their probable search for checks and credit cards.

"They opened stuff that was just ridiculous," he said. "Bills from the telephone company were opened, and so were notices from insurance companies."

Paulat said that some residents had noticed suspicious people in their neighborhoods, but didn't do anything about it, possibly allowing the mail theft to continue from at least January through May.

"We wish people would be more observant," he said. "One person watched a strange pickup truck at a mailbox two days in a row and didn't note down anything about it."

Postal inspector P.G. Colon is now conducting an investigation, and asked that anyone who may have been notified that someone had tried to cash one of their checks or use one of their credit cards (which may have possibly been stolen through the mail) contact him at 574-3048.

He, too, suggested that "people should be aware of what's going on in their neighborhood.

"If they see something suspicious, jot down a license number. And for your own protection, try not to leave outgoing mail in your mailbox overnight, and pick up your mail as soon as possible after it is delivered."

State: no growth moratorium

The state's regional water quality control board (RWQCB) recommended against placing a growth moratorium on the city of West Sacramento during its Aug. 4 review of the city's sewage treatment plant violations.

As expected, the board supported its staff's conclusion that the city treatment plant can support new development and that West Sacramento is attempting to correct problems at the plant.

Representatives of the Sacramento Valley Toxics Campaign - which sued West Sacramento and one treatment plant staffer over the transgressions -- recommended to the board that a portion of the recent $250,000 fine paid by the city be used to fund a river clean-up fund.

RWQCB officials informally supported that move and suggested that city and toxics campaign personnel apply for funding for this program through the state water quality control board.

Suspects sought in shooting

By David Weller

The body of 22 year old Juan Manuel Trujillo was found shot to death in an apartment at 644 Maple Street Monday morning. Trujillo lived on Briarwood Way in West Sacramento.He was the manager of an Old Sacramento restaurant.

Another West Sacramento resident, 22 year old Patricia Campos, has been arrested as an accused accessory to the crime. "She was picked up in Bell Gardens (near Los Angeles). We're trying to identify three other persons," said Lieutenant Ron Moore of the West Sacramento Police Department.

Police investigators have flown to Southern California to question Campos. She is expected to be brought back to Yolo County soon.

Two of the three people the police are trying to locate lived in the apartment where the body was found. They have dropped out of sight along with their car, a light blue Ford Tempo. The third suspect has not been identified.

An estimated 500-600 locals participate in anti-crime rally

By David Weller

An estimated 500 to 600 people showed up at neighborhood social gatherings throughout West Sacramento last Tuesday evening participating in the "National Night Out Against Crime."

The event was sponsored locally by the West Sacramento Police Department, which worked in cooperation with community residents to organize the get-togethers.

The night was called a "real success" by Lieutenant Ron Moore of the West Sacramento Police Department. "It did basically what we wanted it to do, which was to bring people in the neighborhoods together," he said.

The events included a large block party on Michigan Blvd in the Maple-Holly neighborhood, a basketball game at Tyler and Decker Streets near Linden Road in Southport, a block party at the end of Allen Avenue off of Linden, a barbecue dinner in the clubhouse at the El Rancho Mobile Home Park on West Capital Avenue, a gathering on Higgins Road in Southport, and another one at Hobson Avenue and Kegle Drive near Sacramento Avenue.

Lieutenant Moore reported that there were also several smaller groups of neighbors throughout the city who observed the event in unofficial gatherings.

Police CSO Lisa Cox with McGruff the Crime Dog and residents at a "Night Out Against Crime" block party.

The largest gathering occurred in the Maple-Holly neighborhood, an area known for its crime problems.

"It was impressive that so many people could be out in the street. There was no violence, no drugs, and very little alcohol," said Patricia Nims, one of the organizers of the Maple-Holly block party.

Nims said that she participated in the event because she "wanted to make a strong statement" about the importance of neighborhood residents participating in the fight against crime. "It's our neighborhood. We live here. We're the ones who say what activities we won't accept here," she said.

Nims estimated that about 250 to 300 people showed up throughout the evening. There were organized games for the children, and musical entertainment provided by neighborhood guitarist Wes Rhodes. Alhambra Meats donated the hot dogs.

The fire department also showed up and allowed the kids to explore the truck.

Nims also said that she wanted to thank everyone who participated in organizing the party, including thanks to Community Services Officer Lisa Cox.

City police chief moves ahead with color scheme evaluation

By Steve Marschke

Police chief Larry Gore is still quietly working on plans to change the department's squad car colors.

"I assure you it will be professional and something the city of West Sacramento can be proud of," he said. The cars are currently painted magenta and white.

Gore said that the whole idea arose after a request from some of the officers, who did not think the current colors suited a police vehicle. A handful of community residents have spoken out against the proposed change.

"When all this kind of surfaced, the question was raised by some officers of whether I would consider changing it. The answer was yes, I'd consider it."

A committee is now working on re-designing the logo and colors of the cars, and Gore said he hopes to find a way to make the cars instantly identifiable as police vehicles, but distinctive to West Sacramento. If a black and white color scheme is chosen, he said, it will be painted on the vehicle differently than on California Highway Patrol cars.

"It has to be a highly visible police car, even to people from out of town, and secondly it has to be highly identifiable as a West Sacramento police car."

Gore said that agencies such as the CHP may have done scientific research on the effects of different color schemes on the visibility or the psychology of the patrol cars, but he doesn't have access to that information.

The change, if it occurs, will be approved within the next few weeks and instituted over the next three to four months, he added.

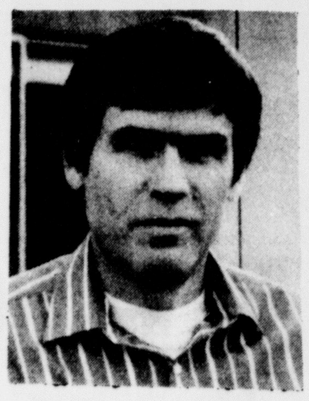
Correction

An article in last week's News-Ledger confused the attendance figures at two different West Sacramento locations during the "Night Out Against Crime" festivities on Aug. 2.

The attendance at the Maple/Holly block party was several times higher than that which was reported. The News-Ledger regrets the error.

Romance (almost) always blossoms during night at movies

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Last Thursday night, my wife and I went on our first double-date in years. More specifically, we took my sixteen-year-old son and a new friend of his to see the movie "Forrest Gump."

"Dad," whispered my son as the usher took our tickets from us and tore them in half, "do we really have to sit with you and Mom?"

"Well," I said, trying to sound like my feelings were hurt, "I guess not, but I think your mother is looking forward to all four of us kinda hanging out together."

"Okay," said my son reluctantly, "I guess we'll go ahead and sit with you, but first you gotta promise me that you're not going to say or do anything stupid."

"Who -- me?" I asked, shocked by the suggestion that I might act inappropriately on my son's first night out on the town with a new young lady. "Whatever do you mean?"

"Come on, Dad -- please, just promise."

"Okay, okay," I said, crossing my fingers behind my back, "I promise."

Shortly after we had all taken our seats and the lights had been turned down, I smiled lovingly at my nervous son, took my startled wife into my arms, and began necking with her.

"Dad," yelled my son, taking his companion by the hand and standing up, "you promised! That is gross -- and we're outta here!"

As my son and his date went in search of better seats, my wife pushed me back where I belonged and turned her attention to the opening credits of "Forrest Gump." I, on the other hand, let my thoughts wander all the way back to the very first time I took a girl to an indoor movie.

It was a Jerry Lewis movie, and although I no longer remember the name of it, I do vividly recall that it took me most of a month to work up the courage to ask Molly -- fictitious name of course -- to go with me. Actually, in a superhuman effort to totally insulate myself from any hint of rejection, I asked a friend of mine to ask a friend of his who knew a friend of hers to ask her for me. After a day or two of slyly passing secret notes back and forth - -one of which I tried to chew up and swallow when Mr. Lloyd -- my eight grade teacher -- strolled suspiciously up to my desk -- Molly's best friend finally tapped me on the shoulder, giggled, and assured me it was a done deal.

The next Saturday afternoon, with my nerve-racked body reeking of my dad's Old Spice cologne and my hair plastered down with a double-dose of Brylcream, my mom and I pulled up in front of Molly's house. After I had assured her father -- the Arnold Schwarzenegger of his day -- that I would have his only daughter safely back in less than three hours, we silently climbed into the backseat of my dad's station wagon and spent the next fifteen minutes clinging to our respective doors and listening to my poor mother try to make small talk.

Once inside the beautiful old Fox theater, however, things definitely started to pick up.

"Where would you like to sit?" I finally managed to blurt out.

"In the back is okay I guess," she answered with a surprisingly friendly smile.

"Really?" I said, sure that her words were actually a secret signal that all girls used when they wanted to do more than just sit around for two hours and watch Jerry Lewis make a fool of himself.

With the movie about half over, I sucked up all the courage I could muster and decided to make my move -- which consisted of faking a yawn, stretching both of my arms high over my head, and then dropping one of them down -- with a loud thud -- on the back of Molly's seat. Then with stealth-like cunning, I very carefully inched my hand to within what couldn't have been more than a fingernail of her shoulder. But that is where my nerve totally deserted me, and nomatter how much I double-dared myself to go ahead and actually make physical contact, I just couldn't bring myself to do it. So, there I sat, for at least a good hour, with my arm uncomfortably draped over the back of Molly's hard seat, too afraid to lay it on her soft shoulder, and not yet knowledgeable of a decent "return move" which could have extradited me from the whole situation.

Molly, being the sweet young thing she was, finally took pity on me, reached back, gently grabbed my hand, and pulled it down on her shoulder. Just when I was about to jump for joy, it dawned on me that my arm--all the way up to just above what I am sure was the sweatiest armpit in the theater -- had fallen asleep. I desperately tried to move it a little on my own, but it was completely dead to the world. Then the most incredibly painful case of pins and needles ever known to man started. It began in my fingertips and very, very slowly -- and torturously -- worked its way up to my aching shoulder.

"What's the matter?" asked Molly as I bit down hard on my lip and squirmed around in my seat.

"Oh, nothing," I assured her, my face full of agony.

Mistakenly thinking that I wasn't really enjoying our newfound intimacy, she yanked my throbbing arm off her shoulder and unceremoniously returned it to my lap, abruptly bringing to an end any hope I had of attempting my next move -- which I had been daydreaming about since the very first day of the onset of puberty.

Stupid is as stupid does, I remember thinking to myself -- or words to that effect.

TOWN HALL TALK

Contributed by the City of West Sacramento

This is the first in a series of articles which will appear regularly in The News-Ledger and will cover a variety of topics concerning city government and services. This article was developed based on common inquiries made to the City's finance department. When budget time rolls around each summer many people have questions and comments about how the City spends money, and why it should increase certain services or cut back on others. City Hall receives suggestions ranging from which cutbacks to make to creative ideas for raising new revenue. While we continue to welcome your thoughts and ideas, we'd like to take a moment to explain, in general terms, how and why funds for city services are apportioned.

As a general law city, West Sacramento must operate in accordance with laws governing the State of California. Fundamental regulations for financing city operations are developed on the state level.

City revenues come from three basic sources: taxes, fees and fines. Under California law, the use of funds raised through taxes and fees (except general taxes) are restricted to the purpose for which they were levied. For example, gasoline taxes must be used for road maintenance and construction. Fees for sewer service must be used for sewer operations or construction of new facilities. Thus, the nature of tax- or fee-based activities is that the level of service is determined by the ability to generate tax revenues or fees.

The exception to this use restriction is a small group of general tax revenues from property and sales taxes. These revenues can be used for a variety of municipal purposes and are placed in a city's general fund to be allocated to services and activities which are not self-supporting through special taxes and user fees. These services include police, fire, and community services such as parks and recreation. General tax revenues are allocated to these services based on community support— the more support, the larger the increase in services.

Finally, while it is true that West Sacramento has reserve funds, most of it has been set aside as a contingency for emergencies and to fund capital improvement projects and equipment. Reserve funds earmarked for capital improvement projects and equipment have been collected through special fees and, accordingly under California law, must be used for the purpose for which it was collected.

Most city activities are sized in accordance with their ability to collect specific taxes or fees. On the other hand, public safety and community services must compete for revenue from general taxes. An increase in police service will result in a decrease in fire or community services, unless property and sales tax revenue increases faster than the costs of providing these services.

For more information on our city's financing structure, call the Finance Department at City Hall 373-5816.

Help us share the news of your sports group or community organization. Just drop the News-Ledger a line (and a photo, if possible) and we'll do our best to get it into the News-Ledger -- West Sac's only local, independent newspaper.

Sorority helps plan flowers at Yolo Fair

For over 20 years, the Woodland chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority has supervised the flower department at the Yolo County Fair.

This year, they decided to give the building a new look and build a special sign that will add color and spark new interest in this building. They hope to bring more people,e to the Hall of Flowers and hopefully inspire new entries.

"We're also trying to put some money the sorority earns during the fair back into the Hall," says Jean Malcolm of the sorority.

Lorraine Poarch and Chris Wilson, pictured at right, co-chaired this project. Mrs. Poarch designed the pattern; the patterns were transferred to wood and the fair personnel cut the pieces out. It's not just one sign, but rather several signs with many pieces. They were all painted bright, fun colors by members of the sorority.

You'll only see the sign during fair time. Parts of it are inside the building and others are outside. And on the fairgrounds, look for the hummingbirds - three signs telling where to find the Hall of Flowers.

News-Ledger Editorial

Getting everybody on the same civic wavelength

This News-Ledger contains a new feature from the City of West Sacramento, prepared by the city's new public relations firm. Tentatively called "Talk of the Town," it aims to increase the communication between city officials and residents of West Sacramento.

Questions from residents about city operations and services are welcome, and can be directed to this newspaper to be dealt with in future "Talk of the Town" columns."

So here's a question which seems to be on a lot of minds around town. To a large degree, city officials know the answer after hours of policy meetings, but that answer has not thoroughly been communicated to the "person on the street:"

What, exactly, are the city's priorities?

In other words, exactly what is city hall trying to accomplish the hardest, since not everything West Sacramento needs can be accomplished in one fell swoop? Is development a priority? If so, which developments?

What does city hall hope will be changed and improved about West Sacramento two or three years from now? Besides basic services like police and fire, what projects are city employees concentrating on the most? When will these efforts truly bear fruit?

Wisely, the West Sacramento city council learned a couple of years ago that it can't solve everything at once. Not everything that voters had on their wish list when they voted for city incorporation in 1986 can be delivered in one year, or five, or even ten.

So, over donuts on a Saturday morning, the council began a new strategy: one of focused priorities. Developments, public works projects and other goals were placed in order, prioritized by importance and feasibility.

Communicating these goals to a somewhat frustrated public would be a major victory to city hall.

Cheer up a soldier: join the military pen-pal program

From the USO: "United in Service to Others"

This year's "Mail for our Military" program is now underway! Mail from participants in every part of the U.S. will be combined and then separated into more than 1,000 packages of varying size and sent to units, bases and support agencies (USOs, Armed Services YMCA's, hospitals, etc.) all across the U.S. and around the world.

"Thank you for...the Christmas cards your organization sent to us...This was an important boost to morale!", wrote a Navy chaplain. And from the first sergeant of an Air Force hospital, "The program you have established is very important and useful to boosting the morale of our...personnel...I would like to express my personal thanks...Please continue in your efforts and your support."

"Mail for our Military" is a terrific project for everyone, of interest in every locale from which someone is serving, or where anyone is interested in the morale of our men and women in uniform. Scores of individuals, groups, churches, military, schools and colleges are so "into" this program that they send more than 1,000 cards and letters each. To find our what the excitement is all about, and how to help boost morale and spirits at more than 1,000 places all across the U.S. and around the world, interested readers should send a first-class postage stamp for return postage (a stamped, self-addressed envelope cannot be used - just the stamp), along with their name and address, to: Mail for our Military, P.O. Box 415, Fort Campbell, KY 42223-0415.

Dramatic testing

May I suggest to your readers an education assessment test that in the long run is not an average on a statewide adopted pencil and paper test but how the graduates of its system are able to obtain the skills needed to become contributing citizens, because they have acquired vocational and avocational skills?

The production of the musical "Fantastiks" in Sacramento's Old Town offers a good example. The director, Chris Tulysewski, and the producer, Leah Ladd, are products of Thespian productions at River City. Roy Engoron, drama teacher and producer of the plays is a talented, dedicated faculty member who gives something more important than state mandated curriculum to students in his classes and performers and staff in school plays. There are many others like him who have continued to give our students what they as individuals with various talents need to enter the world of work or higher education despite whatever circus there was at the district or state level.

To some drama and plays are frills; the reality is that entertainment is an industry and as in the Fantastiks a shared cultural history. The leadership given by these recent graduates of River City to the Sacramento theater scene is really extraordinary. When you go to see the proof of the educational pudding, you will also note that the drums in the small combo are played by another graduate of River City, CSUS student Brian Benson, who delivers a professional touch.

Og of the 90s

What's up with Daryl Fisher? Does he fancy himself the Og Mandino of the 90's?

So suffering makes one "Christlike" and "more acceptable to God." I have to wonder, just how many people has he seen suffer thru such an agonizing death as cholera? Do I believe these people laid amongst thousands of decomposing corpse and offered their final prayer to God - thanking him for letting them suffer so? No and my God would not be happy for me.

While I'm at it, please ask the "Old Great One" what the suffering in Rwanda has done to change the course of his life? As C.S. Lewis wrote -

"Something must drive us out of our own self and into the world of others - and that something is suffering."

Now I ask you, is a voyeur any different than "the guy who skated thru life" and never noticed? I think not -

Bus service

Our recent changes in local YoloBus service have been positive, overall. But some questions remain: (1) Why not later service in Southport, even at the expense of some later a.m./early p.m. buses? Note: The Southport commute service is being maintained. (2) With county offices and our police department moving near the north end of Jefferson Blvd., the "8:30 a.m. - 4 p.m." bus #39 service may be ample for the public, but not quite so for employees; (3) Bus stops should still be restored at 930 Westacre Road, the headquarters of Washington United School District, where building parking lots tell the story: Not only is it hard for visitors to park during business hours, but a negative message is there for potential employees and students without cars; also, WUSD is midway between two of the farthest-spaced bus stops in our city; (4) We continue to have only limited service to the industrial area - west of City Hall and south of West Capitol Ave. - where we have the Sacramento Area's main post office whose staff works longer than "8 to 5" and the local Social Security office, many of whose patrons cannot do the hike over Business 80/U.S. 50 to Halyard Drive and back. (Yet, access to Social Security is classified as a "luxury"...) Also, jobs continue to go begging in that area since many do not pay enough for job holder to support a car and insurance...and like too many other employers nowadays: Only part-time workers are wanted, so that employer need not pay fringe benefits, including health insurance! When will we decide that matching the jobless to jobs is important enough? (And costs of jobless benefits vs. costs of public transit...?)

The city and the state are still somewhat at odds over the features of widening the Harbor Blvd. overcrossing of Business 80/U.S. 50, mainly over how different designs - if implemented - will adversely impact existing/potential development of nearby property. Traffic flow to/from this area is also important to the Industrial Bridge and Harbor/West Capitol Ave. junctures.

Our worst juncture is the Pioneer Bridge on/off ramp at Jefferson and Park Blvds. But rather than spend all those millions and block off Park Blvd.'s east end, why not just build that other bridge southward across the Sacramento River...sooner? (AKA: Reducing the traffic demand.)

Bryte Rejects Merger Demand

(See Letter on Page 8)

Directors of the Bryte sanitary district have rejected the West Sacramento sanitary district's demand that Bryte's force main be replaced as a condition for the consolidation of the Bryte, Broderick and West Sacramento districts.

This was the result of action taken Friday night at the regular monthly meeting of the Bryte directors, who discussed for almost four hours the terms and conditions for consolidation presented by West Sacramento.

Their answer is contained in a diplomatically worded letter which does not actually reject the terms, but instead suggests the districts consolidate "as is", claims that replacement of the force main at this time would be a waste of taxpayers' money and points out the Bryte district has enough money on hand to offset the cost of repairing the main for several years to come.

The force main delivers the Bryte district's sewage to the West Sacramento treatment plant on South River road in the West Sacramento district. The cost of replacing it has been estimated at approximately $168,000.

The condition was laid down at a special meeting of the West Sacramento directors November 16. In a list of terms and conditions adopted at that session, the Broderick district would also be required to make a major improvement -- replacement of a portion of a major sewage line at an estimated cost of $25,000. At their meeting Wednesday evening, November 25, the Broderick board took no action on the letter from the West Sacramento board but it is understood the directors of that district will make no objection to the condition.

The Bryte district board recommended that if their first suggestions are not agreeable, that an independent survey be conducted to determine what action should be taken.

In their deliberations Friday night, the Bryte directors also:

Acknowledged receipt of the minutes of the special joint meeting of directors of the three districts held November 9 but noted discrepancies between the minute notations and the actual proceedings.

Heard Don Reinoehl, the district's consulting engineer, suggest that even if consolidation is accomplished, the area should seriously consider abandoning the

Hospital Problem Is Told

It costs $103 for three hours of treatment in Yolo General hospital in Woodland and $135 for a three days' stay in the Sutter Memorial hospital in Sacramento.

This is the experience related this week to the News-Ledger by Harry Finkbeiner of 422 B street in Broderick, who also reported:

It took the county hospital from March until almost the end of November of this year to forward forms for payment of the bill to his insurance company.

He delivered a second set of insurance forms to the hospital, got a demand for payment of his bill from the district attorney's office and his account was turned over to the Retailers Credit association for collection before the routine paper work was taken care of in Woodland.

And, in addition, he had to be confined to Sutter for three days because the nose injury he received in an auto collision in Broderick on March 11 wasn't properly treated in Woodland and had to be done over at the Sacramento hospital.

Finkbeiner, a construction worker, said his insurance company paid the Sutter hospital within five days because the forms were filled out and sent to the company. And when the county hospital finally filed its claim -- on November 28 -- it took only six days for a check to be issued by the insurance firm.

It's all over now, Finkbeiner states, except that he now has a check for $25 from his insurance company which is payable to the doctor who treated him at Yolo General, but the doctor has since left the county hospital and can't be located.

Two Big Plants May Locate Here

Two major corporations -- one from the east and one from the southern part of the country -- are considering sites in West Sacramento for construction of new west coast plants.

The News-Ledger has learned thatfinal selection of sites by both concerns is expected to be made "in the very near future."

Location of the plants here would mean a major boost in local employment.

The West Sacramento plant sites are being considered because of their close proximity to the Port of Sacramento, the News-Ledger was informed.

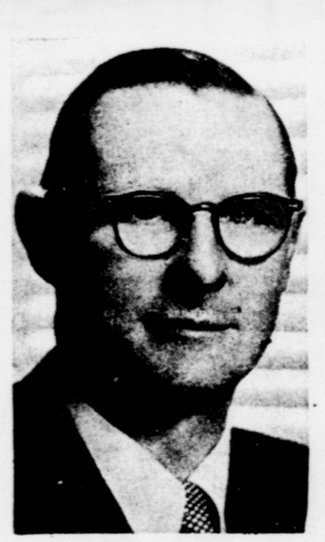
Nickell, Western Oil President, Retires

Wallace H. Nickell, one of the founders of the Western Hyway Oil company and the Regal chain of service stations, both adquartered in West Sacramento, retired this week as president of Western Hyway and general manager of Regal Stations, Inc.

Nickell, who resides in Sacramento with his wife, said he will continue for a time as a consultant to the firms which have been wholly owned subsidiaries of the Signal Oil and Gas company since 1960.



W. H. NICKELL

Bernard H. (Barney) Hansen, who previously served as sales manager for both organizations, has been named to manage the two West Sacramento based petroleum firms.

A native of Sacramento, Nickell attended West Point and the University of California at Berkeley and entered the petroleum business about 35 years ago. During World War II he served five years with the U. S. Army in the Pacific theater and retired in 1958 as a brigadier general in the army reserve.

In 1950, Nickell joined with Primo (Dal) Dalporto, James A. Blood and the Signal Oil and Gas company to form the Western Hyway Oil company in West Sacramento. He is a member of the West Sacramento Rotary club, the West Sacramento District chamber of commerce and West Sacramento Post 8762 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Nickell owns a 55 foot cutter, the Santana, which he has entered in a number of sail boat races over the past several years. He and his crew won the season championship last year in the Northern California Bay Area Crusing Club.

Federal Agents Enter Counterfeit Case

Federal authorities have entered the investigation of the $40,000 worth of counterfeit Bank of America travelers checks reportedly printed in West Sacramento, as bogus $20 checks continue to be received by the bank from Oregon, Idaho and Utah.

This was reported yesterday by Lieutenant Roy Eskridge of the Yolo county sheriff's department, who said additional arrests are expected to be made as authorities press their search for passers of the phony checks.

William D. Payne, owner-operator of a printing plant at 524 Houston street, West Sacramento, and Sam Moore, a printer employed at the plant, are among the five persons arrested in connection with the alleged counterfeit ring.

Volunteers raise over $600 for locals

By Steve Marschke

Denny's restaurant employees teamed up with community volunteers and patrons to raise about $644 for two local causes last Tuesday evening, Aug. 2.

During its "celebrity server" night, local politicians, media figures, civic leaders and others joined to help wait tables as friends and supporters dined. The restaurant donated ten percent of its sales to be split among the West Sacramento Senior Center and the city parks and community services department, to help fund programs.

Desiree Tandy, one of the many Denny's employees who donated their labor to work during the evening, was teamed as a waitress with West Sacramento Mayor Cindy Tuttle.

"I had lots of fun," Tandy reported. "Cindy was excellent. She used to be a waitress. She was taking all the orders and came across well with everyone."

Tandy and Tuttle, like the other servers, donated the tips they earned to the charities.

"In our tables, we had a couple of tables leave $30 and one that left $50," she said.

Manager Jay Javidan said the event was a huge success, and that he hopes to hold future "celebrity server" nights with other community groups.

"We really strive to make this Denny's something other than a roadside coffee shop," he said of the restaurant's Enterprise Blvd. location near the I-80 freeway. "We want to make it a community restaurant, where people feel like they belong."

Former mayor Ray Jones spent an hour serving tables and reported that the restaurant was "swamped."

"It definitely enhanced my appreciation of waiters and waitresses," he said. "(City manager) Joe Goeden was running around like crazy, and so was (Chamber of Commerce director) Steve Roberts. Cindy Tuttle put in a double shift."

Jones said the whole experience was fun.

"It was a fun evening, and very profitable," he said. "It worked very well for both Denny's and the City of West Sacramento."

Sidewalk art

This Labor Day weekend will bring to Sacramento the fourth annual Chalk it up to Sacramento sidewalk painting festival. The highlight of the event will be our team of volunteer artists who will be creating chalk art masterpieces directly on the sidewalk pavement. The artists will work on their pieces throughout the three-day weekend, and the public is invited to watch. If the artistic inspiration is too contagious, there will be free arts and crafts activities. The public is invited to bring their families out to enjoy the festival atmosphere, and relax in beautiful, shaded Fremont Park.

For those budding artists in the community who would like to do their own chalk drawings, a "community square" will be offered, where they can try the chalk-on-pavement medium free of charge. For a $10 donation, the public will be able to purchase a "concrete canvas" and a box of chalk pastels to create their own sidewalk masterpiece.

Once again this year, the artworks will be sponsored by local businesses, organizations and families. The proceeds generated through their generosity will benefit local children's art education projects.

History

The West Sacramento Historical Society will resume its monthly meeting schedule beginning Aug. 16. The society meets on the third Tuesday of every month from 6:30 to 8:00 p.m. at the Turner Library.

Yolo Fair is subject of today's radio show

Rosie Klassen, marketing director for the Yolo County Fair, will be featured today on West Sacramento Kaleidoscope between 12:05 and 1 p.m. on Radio KJAY - 1430 AM. She will bring up-to-date news about the fair, which will take place August 17 through 21 in Woodland.

Tune in to hear about the exhibits, carnival, horse show, and other animal divisions, as well as the many other activities.

The show is broadcast live from Johnnie's Sidewalk Pizza, 1301 Merkely Ave. in West Sacramento. The hosts for this program will be Steve Roberts and Bob Dunham of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce.

Organizations and individuals wishing to participate on the show and discuss topics of local interest are encouraged to contact the Chamber at 371-7042. Included in the program is a local community calendar, with a number of items supplied by the local media.

Next week on August 17, Rusty Mendez from Channel 6 will be the guest on Kaleidoscope on the subject of "Barney."

Sponsors are Johnnie's Sidewalk Pizza and the Chamber of Commerce.

Grand jury reports available at News-Ledger, elsewhere

The Yolo County Grand Jury reports that it does not have enough funds to distribute copies of its 1993-94 report through West Sacramento newspapers, as it did in Davis and Woodland.

Jurors did distribute a number of the reports at various locations throughout West Sacramento. A limited number are available free of charge at the News-Ledger (phone 371-8030), the West Sacramento Press and the Chamber of Commerce.
